INTRODUCTION TO THE SCHOOL

The establishment of Tsinghua University Vanke School of Public Health is a timely demonstration of Tsinghua's capacity to shoulder its responsibilities as a globally-leading university. Tsinghua University Vanke School of Public Health aims to be a catalyst for high-level international cooperation and industry collaboration, delivering outstanding personnel training, academic faculty development and cutting-edge scientific research. With a strong foundation and mandate, the School will improve the national public health system and the overall national governance, as well as promote the development of global public health and human health undertakings.

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

Tsinghua University since 2013 has created a graduate level, interdisciplinary and cross-cultural degree program focused on global public health. The International Master of Public Health (IMPH) Program is aimed at building a new generation of global public health leaders in the world through the participation of recognized faculty and expertise from across Tsinghua University and partners around the world. These English taught courses are specifically designed for public health officials, disease prevention and control specialists and health program managers from developing and developed countries, with the fundamental purpose of improving the health conditions and achieving health equity in the world. The program prepares students to address global health challenges and issues of health service delivery, health product accessibility and global health policy.
